

CUTTING

Your 12-week welcome packet, built to lose fat while protecting the muscle and strength you have already earned.

Welcome

Welcome to Echelon. You already have a training base, and these 12 weeks are built to keep it while your body composition changes. This is not a general weight-loss plan, it is a cut, built to protect what you have worked for while the scale moves.

Your Program At a Glance

Format: 4 lifting days a week, 2 conditioning finishers, and 1 active recovery day.

Phase	Weeks	What's Happening
1: Foundation	1-4	Strength retention, movement quality, building work capacity.
2: Density	5-8	Rest drops as sets hit the top of the range, metabolic stress rises.
3: Peak Push	9-11	Heavier loads, added finishers, your highest weekly output.
Deload	12	Volume cut about 40 percent, reassess measurements and photos, plan the next block.

How We Work Together

- Your day-by-day training lives in Today's Work inside your Member Portal, log in anytime to see what's next, and mark it complete once you finish.
- Check in honestly. Tell your coach what actually happened, not what you think we want to hear, an honest "I missed two days" helps us adjust; a false "everything's perfect" just delays the fix.
- If something hurts (not just the normal soreness of training), stop, message your coach before your next session, and see a clinician if it does not resolve. Never push through real pain.
- Your plan will change. What you start Week 1 with is not what you will be doing Week 8, that is not the plan failing, that is the plan working.

What Makes Cutting Different

Cutting is built to protect the muscle and strength you have already earned while you lose fat. Unlike a general weight-loss approach, this program assumes you have a training base and keeps your lifting intensity high throughout, so the number on the scale drops without your strength dropping with it.

The Echelon Standard

Every Echelon program is built on the same four things: Structure, a proven system that removes the guesswork; Accountability, coaching and check-ins that keep momentum moving; Commitment, progress earned by returning to the standard, especially when motivation is low; and Faith, strength that starts internally, character and purpose driving everything else. The exercises in front of you are specific to your goal. The standard behind them is the same for every person who trains with us.
